EXAMINER'S REVIEW OF PROVINCIAL MARKETS

Calgary, Sept. 6.

Cattle.—Beef—Calgary had a quiet but steady market, and prices are unchanged on the steers, but females weaker. Choice heavy and light steers, $4.50 to $5; good, $3.50 to $4.25; medium, $3 to $3.50; common down to $2. Choice cows, $3.25 to $3.50; good, $2.75 to $3.20; medium, $2 to $2.50; common, $1.50 to $2; canners down to 50c. Choice heifers up to $3.75. Choice bulls up to $2; common to good, $1.25 to $1.75. Calves steady, choice, $5 to $5.75; common, $2 to $4.50. Feeders, Stockers—Market still active, but not just as high on tops, choice feeders, $3.50 to $4.25; stocker steers, $2.50 to $3.75; stock heifers, $2.25 to $2.75; stock cows, $1.50 to $2.75.

Beef—Edmonton has a demand for good beef and tender and stocker cattle, but common cattle inclined to drag. Choice heavy steers, $4.25 to $4.75; choice light, $4 to $4.50; good, $3.50 to $4; medium, $3 to $3.50; common down to $2. Choice cows, $2.75 to $3.25; good, $2.25 to $2.75; medium, $1.75 to $2.25; canners down to $1. Choice heifers make $3.75. Bulls unchanged at $1.75 to $2 for choice; others $1 to $1.50. Calves slightly lower at $5 to $5.50 for choice; common, $2 to $3. Feeders, Stockers—Good demand, with choice feeders $3 to $4, and some $4.25; plain stocker steers down to $1.50; breeding stock now asked for and some cows

Sheep.—Very few sheep at Calgary; best lambs up to $10.50; ewes from $6.50 down.

Edmonton sheep market steady, with lambs $9 to $10.50; yearlings, $7.50 to $8.50; ewes, $3 to $7.

Markets very uncertain these days and European situation making it worse. First cars of Alberta wheat grading well. Winnipeg reports on receipts from that province show poor quality. Harvest weather in Alberta fairly good.

Butter—Cheese—Cream.—Creamery Butter—Car lot price stronger, with quotation 32½ to 33c, basis spot; prints and cartons unchanged at 30c to 37c. Cheese—Market steady and looks like holding around 30c to 25c. Butterfat—Prices unchanged, but if butter market holds present strength will advance in line. Dairy Butter—Light receipts and only ordinary demand; eggs, 25c to 25c; straight receipts, 15c from dealers.

Eggs—Poultry.—Eggs—Market firm and unchanged, with Calgary dealers quoting extras 33c, No. 1 30c, No. 2 25c, cracks 12c. Poultry—Prices unchanged.

Hay.—Hay—Market business very slow; timidly weaker at $15 to $16; upland, $9 to $11; alfalfa, $10 to $11.

Wool.—London wool sales will be on soon and hopes are expressed that prices will be better.

Hides.—No improvement in market and dealers are wondering what will be done with heavy take off during fall season.

Furs.—Montreal auction on this week. Results may cause some change in buying prices.

A MODEL COLLECTION LETTER

It is rumored that a certain young society lady of this city intends to buy gloves on. This incident may be peculiar, but there are others. We need bread with our shirt on. We need bread with our shoes on. We need bread with our pants on, and unless we get a few of our outstanding accounts on our books, we will soon need bread without a shirt on, and this city will be a Garden of Eden, if collections don't improve. You can do much to prevent this.

Please send us your check to balance your account. Thanks!

SHIPS OF WAR AND COMMERCE RUSHED BY MANY NATIONS TO SUCCOR EARTHQUAKE VICTIMS

No Count of Victims Made in Yokohama, More Completely Destroyed, but Loss of Life There is Terrible—Tell Among the Foreign Residents is Greatest in That City.

The Japanese nation, stricken by what is probably the greatest disaster of the modern era, turns bravely to the tremendous task ahead, marshaling her shattered resources to succor the hundreds of thousands who suffer from injury and from hunger, laying her hands for the rebuilding of her ruined cities.

While the rest of the world hurries its ships of war and commerce, deep laden with relief supplies, to Japanese waters, Premier Yamamoto sent a message to the people urging them to unite in the trying hours through which they are passing and appealing to them to make a supreme effort to relieve the suffering and expedite the work of reconstruction.

The cables say that already orders for building materials have been received in England, while leading construction engineers and architects in New York have offered their assistance in making a New Japan.

Yokohama Destroyed

Yokohama is a city of desolation, far more severely smitten than is the capital, Tokio. A message received from Kobe at the state department in Washington confirms previous word that the great port of Japan has been completely destroyed with a tremendous loss of life.

The Japanese home office figures issued. No official count of deaths and injured and 300,000 are homeless. These are the first official figures issued. No official count of deaths and injured and 300,000 are homeless. These are the first official figures issued.

A cable from Pekin reports that a new island has appeared off the coast of the island of Oshima and has disappeared and it is feared that its 10,000 inhabitants have perished.

Guinea Area Crushed.—Tokio, Sept. 6.—Tokio and Yokohama, separated by only a few miles of water, today lie in ruins. The overpowering force of an earthquake—a series of upheavals—that came with scant warning and brought crashing down the houses and business places of these great cities.

All around for many miles other cities and villages have been dashed from their foundations and what the vibrations of the earth failed to accomplish was completed by fire and tidal wave.

While entire sections of the capital remain a very considerable extent of the city remains. Not so with Yokohama, refugees from which place are beginning to find their way into Tokyo. They tell of the terrific destruction wrought at that place, which has been of vast importance to the commerce of the western world.

Dead Block Streets

The streets and water courses, canals and sewers, are filled with dead and among the dead are doubtless many injured, to whom it has been impossible to take succor.

In Yokohama, far more than in Tokio, foreign residents and visitors suffered loss of life and injury. It is estimated that not less than 200 foreigners perished, but even yet no comprehensive account can be extracted from the refugees, who reached here in an almost exhausted condition.

Leap Into Canals

The overwhelming effects of the first shock may be realized when it is told that thousands of Japanese, caught by the flames that swept through the city almost immediately, driven by the high winds, leaped into the canals and, finding no safety in any direction, were drowned or overcame by the debris which soon choked the waterways.

To add to the dangers, immense crevices opened in the streets, in some places isolating entire blocks and making it absolutely impossible for those within these sections to find safety from the fire.

Many Cremated

For two days the fires of Tokio raged, destroying possibly 200,000 houses and property, the value of which cannot be estimated, cremating the bodies of many dead, and probably ending the sufferings of scores of injured. The casualty list will be very great; estimates at the present time vary from 50,000 upwards in Tokio alone.

How many were killed in the outlying districts is not known, because for a long time Tokio has been cut from communication with the outside world.

First Direct News

The foregoing is the first direct news dispatch, received from the Japanese capital since Saturday, when the earthquake occurred. Tokio was for a considerable time shut off from all communications with the outside world; then couriers, bearing dispatches, were sent out for the nearest radio stations which had escaped destruction and meagre dispatches, giving brief details began to filter through from points such as Osaka, which lay outside the zone of destruction.

Red Cross Busy

Washington, Sept. 6.—While the Red Cross pushed forward practical relief measures for the Japanese earthquake sufferers, indications today were that the appeal for a $75,000,000 relief fund to be administered by the organization was meeting with the most responsive response.

An initial purchase of food, medical supplies and shelter material to go toward the relief of the victims has been ordered by the Red Cross.

FORD WEEKLY PURCHASE PLAN

It is no longer necessary for anybody to do without a motor car. If a person cannot afford to buy one outright, a plan has already been adopted by the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, in conjunction with the Traders Finance Corporation, Limited, by which the payment down of $100 plus freight and government taxes entitles a person to delivery of a Ford car—non-starter touring model. On later models have their own respective down payments.

A still further convenience has been added in that of those who have not the ability to pay down the lump sum above mentioned.

This plan goes into effect immediately. This plan, as is stated, has been formulated as the final link in the original Ford plan to "build a car for the multitude" and make it possible for almost anybody to own a Ford car, truck or tractor, and is called the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan.

This is the essence of the announcement given out by the head office of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, in Montreal.

Under the terms of the newly announced plan, the average wage-earner can purchase a Ford car, truck or tractor by making an initial payment of whatever he deems convenient, the balance being paid off in regular weekly payments of a definite amount which is also fixed by the purchaser himself.

The purchaser makes his initial payment to his local Ford dealer, who receives it on behalf of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, and a purchase contract is entered upon for whatever model the purchaser desires. Interest on this plan is computed at the standard chartered bank rate and may be lowered as the final payment on the car. The purchaser may increase the payments at any time.

The purchaser may make weekly payments until the full purchase price of the car is paid for.

Or, when the purchaser has paid an amount of $100 (plus freight and government taxes)—in case the purchaser desires a non-starter touring model—the purchaser becomes entitled to delivery of the car, and balance may be paid on the deferred payment plan in 12 equal monthly instalments, or these instalments may be paid weekly.

SLUETH DIDN'T SNIFF MUCH

The stranger hung around one car so persistently that the yardmaster became uneasy and sent for the brakeman.

"Anything queer in that car, buddy?" he asked.

"No, a thing," was the answer. "There's a sluth sniffing around."

"I saw him. Let him sniff. That's a car of Texas outfit."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

GOOD MANNERS

We often hear the expression used, "He is a gentleman." In very few cases have those who use such expressions thought out in their own minds just what they mean by the word "gentleman." What is it that constitutes a claim to "the grand old name of gentleman?" Assuredly it is not a matter of clothes. There have been times in the world's history when the different classes of society have been more or less rigidly divided, and each class has worn by custom, if not by law, a certain type of dress. As a result dress might become the badge of the upper or gentle class, but it was never in truth more than that. The dress might constitute a claim to the class. The dress never rightly constituted a claim to the class. Yet here again, as so often has happened in human history, the use of a custom died out and its abuse survived. In other words it became customary, and still to a certain extent is customary, to judge of a man's character by his dress without consideration of the man wearing it. The same mistake or lack of insight is applied in other respects and judgments are pronounced on men based on their accents or other superficial qualities or temporary attributes which have little or nothing to do with the real man. It is this basing of judgments on superficial externals which constitutes the essential character of the contemporary person, the snob.

All this does not by any means infer that the character of a gentleman is consistent with a total indifference at all times to outward appearances or expressions of speech. On the contrary, there are occasions when a careful observance of these things is demanded of a gentleman lest by his neglect of them he should fall in the essential characteristics of his quality. Perhaps the main foundation stone of the character of a gentleman might be described as unselfish consideration for others. A gentleman, that is to say, will avoid unnecessarily hurting the feelings of others, or causing them distress or harm in any way. Sometimes the capacity so to avoid causing distress is a matter of apparent natural instinct in an individual, in which case we say of him that he is an instinctive gentleman. At other times it may be the result of careful training and keen observation. There are men with the instincts of unfeeling selfish brutes, who yet by training have acquired the habit or capacity of concealing either altogether or partially, on necessary occasions their lower characters. That is the dangerous type, which often misleads the careless observer. It is a type which again may be divided into two species, the man who knows that he possesses lower instincts, recognizes and hates them as being lower, and because they are lower he does so hate them—at least in his better moments—so that he craves to crush them. With such a man all may be well in the end. His training of himself may in time become equivalent to instinct. The other species is the man who regards his lower instincts as his favourites, but recognizes that the exhibition of them under certain circumstances may involve him in inconvenience or unpopularity, and therefore merely conceals them temporarily under a mask of better things. To this species belongs that all too common type—the man who is a "perfect gentleman" in dress and deportment at a dinner party or a ball, and a real brute in his own home or among his confidential intimates. Nothing will ever make such a man anything more than a temporary imitation of a gentleman. The test of a good judgment of character is the ability to discern the true from the false—the outward semblance of a "perfect gentleman" which most men assume under ordi-

There are other qualities which go to the making of a gentleman, courage, truth, generosity, cleanliness, but to some extent at least they are included in or spring from the main foundation of unselfishness.

If one thinks on this question it will be seen how these essential qualities of a gentleman will reflect themselves in his outward manners, in his absence of loud, aggressive self-assertion, in a reluctance to obtrude himself and his own interests into the conversation with his friends, in a courteous consideration given to other people's views, in an abstaining from hurting other people's feelings by an ostentatious display of wealth if he possesses it, and conversely, in an avoidance of doing so by parading his poverty, if he is poor, in all the small acts of consideration which cost little more than thoughtfulness for others and yet often count for much with those others.

It does not seem a very exacting or difficult code this of the gentleman. Yet in practice it is not too common, perhaps because most of us are too busy to think it out for ourselves and too prone to form our judgments of ourselves and those around us on superficial considerations or for the even more unworthy reason of our own self-interest. If we took time to think of just what we meant by the word, it is possible that we might be far less ready to give the name of gentleman to some of our acquaintances, or to deny it to others.

TOO MANY OFFICIALS

Our attention has been recently called to the action of the Provincial Government in delegating to the municipalities work hitherto done by the Government and calling upon the municipalities to appoint the necessary paid officials to carry out such work. In the present state of the finances of the average municipality any increase of expenditure involves no little hardship for the individual farmers. In some cases it is practically impossible for the municipalities to comply with the Government's instructions from sheer lack of funds, and we should not be surprised if they intimated that a quiet to the government. It is a quite laudable aim on the part of the government to have both its own departments and those of the subordinate authorities in the province equipped and staffed in an up-to-date fashion, but it is a mistake to try to obtain such an equipment at the cost of overloading the community with taxes. A man starting in business with a small capital, in a small community does not, if he is wise, at once set up an enormous building with all the latest mechanical devices and with a staff to match it. Such a building and such a staff might well be the most efficient eventually for the purposes of the business, but if set up too soon, it will crush and bankrupt the business with overhead expenses. It is difficult not to believe that that is what is happening in Alberta and indeed all over Western Canada. The proportion of government or municipal officials to the whole population is too high and the result is an overloading of the community with taxes. No doubt the professional official, giving all his time to the work, does that work well, but the point is that under certain circumstances he is too expensive, however well he does his work. It is equally true, no doubt, that to starve a government in the interests of economy may result in getting no government at all worthy of the name, and in a consequent loss of efficiency and organization in the community. There is, however, a medium in all things, and in the case of the Alberta Government there would seem to be a need for a drastic overhauling of the whole machinery of government, and for a realization that while it is comparatively easy to suggest valuable additions to that government machinery in various directions, it is necessary to remember the proverb about cutting our coat according to our cloth, and to leave such additions as we make until we are in a position to make them without overstraining our capacity. It is futile for the government to avoid the odium of appointing new officials and adding to the budget deficit, if it is at the same time sending out instructions to the municipalities to appoint new officials. Whether they are provincial or municipal officials, they have to be paid from taxes on the community, and to come out of the pockets of the individual citizens of the province.

PROFESSIONAL ADVERTISING

It is a tradition of long standing in British countries that members of the so-called professional classes such as doctors or lawyers should not advertise or hunt for business in the way that so-called tradesmen do. In Canada the rule has been relaxed to the extent of allowing professional "cards" to be inserted in newspapers but in Great Britain this is not allowed.

Only the modest name on the plate at the door reveals the whereabouts of the haughty physician, surgeon, or man of law. Even the comparatively large signs fastened above the doors of professional offices among us would be regarded with horror in more staid and old-fashioned Britain. Anything in the nature of canvassing or touting for business is still officially frowned on. There is no regular law preventing such advertising, but the custom of the professions and the drastic power given by the law to these professions to regulate their own internal discipline are practically equivalent to a law. The lawyer who infringed this rule of professional etiquette would be liable to find himself haled before the discipline committee of his trade union, otherwise known as The Law Society, accused of disgraceful and unprofessional conduct, and perhaps struck off the rolls. Which means that he is legally prevented from practising as a lawyer again in Canada unless reinstated. Of course, ingenious and unscrupulous individuals try to find a way round the rule with more or less success. Young law graduates may be forbidden, but can it be called touting if one gives a fellow citizen a friendly hint that if his next breach-of-promise action or the next case of alcoholic poisoning in his family is not put into the hands of the friendly lawyer, then the said friendly lawyer, his wife or wives, his children and their heirs, successors and assigns, whosoever will from henceforth and forever buy his or their household goods, chattels, furnishings, food and equipment of all and any description whatever from the aforementioned citizen's deadly business rival? No, nobody can fairly call that touting for business, at least, not unless he wanted that breach-of-promise case or poisoning case for himself, in which circumstances he is a grasping cur-mudgeon and his opinion is of no value whatsoever.

However, the main point is that it seems to be no reason for this rule against professional advertising. Why should some bright young doctor or lawyer or banker be compelled to blush unseen like the gem of purest ray serene the dark unfathomable deep of an ocean bear, merely because he is not allowed to call attention to himself in some sprightly or original fashion? How much brighter—and more profitable, too, though of course that is not why we make the suggestion—would our advertising columns be if they contained such notices as these:

Life is a dreary desert! WHY LINGER ON when Payette & Grapitt, Solicitors, will wind up your estate so cheaply and expeditiously that Your widow will never mourn your loss?

HAVE YOU A PAIN IN YOUR TUMMY? Then let Drs. Parillon and McKenney take your appendix out at once. No patient of ours has ever been able to complain of a fatal operation. (Hardly anybody would see the catch in this last item, we feel certain.)

DO YOU HATE ANYBODY? Then slay him NOW and go to Hone & Scarrott, Barristers. No hanging has ever shadowed our reputation.

Your money returned if you are the first. The banks too might brighten up over so much in their methods. THAVE THE BANK OF PONOKRA SHAKES BERRY WORKING YOU? about that little overdraft?

Then come to the BANK OF WASKASOO. We charge you compound interest so tactfully that you never notice it.

It would be easy to go on like that for columns, but these samples show the possibilities of the new idea, for which we charge nothing extra in this issue. In a dull world anything that will live up to the public should be encouraged. We therefore hope that this reform will be quickly introduced among us. In order to assist this desirable end our tame advertising expert, Mr. Earl Grinnell, will be at ways at the disposal of any of the professional classes who wish to cut salt during our office hours which are from 2 to 3 every afternoon except Saturdays, Sundays, holidays and mornings after. The cheapest rates quoted on application. Give us a trial and attain fame.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The results of the big effort being made by the local Great War Veterans to get funds with which to build a hall in this city came to a head yesterday and Friday. If the citizens in general support them as the business men have done, there is no doubt that the Stampede and Carnival will be a success financially.

We cannot agree with the views of a few people with whom we have conversed that the school should be a school and not a hall. We see no reason why it should be left to the Veterans to take on this very necessary work. They suffered and lost more than any other people just to expect them to take the burden of building public buildings on their shoulders. At any time that the citizens generally undertake the building of a school with the same enthusiasm and expenditure of time and effort that the Veterans are showing in their work, the school will be erected. And at that time there will be no element in the district that will work harder than the Veterans.

The Red Deer Citizens' Band will provide the music at the Stampede. It is to the credit of the Veterans that they secured the services of the local organization. In the past some associations have gone outside for their band attractions and have displeased many citizens by their actions.

Fortunately the first reports of the great disaster in Japan appear to have been exaggerated. It is still the case that the loss of life and property is the greatest that has ever resulted from an earthquake or other natural cause. Many associations have taken immediate steps to give help to the stricken nation. Whether or not one is friendly in spirit towards Japan, it is apparent that it is a case where all that is possible must be done to relieve the unprecedented suffering.

We have seen the wheat crop of Alberta this year estimated at 150 million bushels. This means that for every day of the year there are over seven million bushels at hand beyond the reach of frost. The million dollar rain fund has been set up by the seven million dollar fund days in the fall.

It is a great pity that the wheat pool committee were not able to get the extra two cents per bushel signed up. They are quite right in going on with the pool organization, but their failure would have been a great strengthening by having the necessary fifty percent. to make the contracts alluring. A few papers, like the Alberta and Bulletin, who opposed the scheme because out of it other papers were getting a credit, can be thanked for the failure to get that last necessary bit of acreage.

WEEKLY NEWS BULLETIN

Issued by Publicity Commissioner, Government Buildings, Edmonton.

Alberta Coal in Great Demand.

With the freight rate in effect presently which would put Alberta coal on a competitive basis in Ontario, orders would be on hand to cover for at least a quarter of a million tons, declared Howard Stutchbury, trade commissioner of the province, who returned from what was virtually a tour of triumph through the eastern provinces. Mr. Stutchbury was superintending the distribution of the tons of Alberta coal sent east on the special rate of $3 a ton by the Canadian National. He visited many points in Ontario, accompanied by officials of the C.N.A., and all of these points were anxious to get Alberta coal, provided a freight rate was given that would make it possible. The Ontario government, the C.N.A., the trade councils of the cities, the U.P.O., and other organizations have taken up the campaign, and are bringing pressure to bear upon the Dominion Government to bring about some solution of the problem of freight rates on the coal. A great deal of publicity supplied by the publicity branch of the Alberta government is being used in the east, and Mr. Stutchbury's meetings were given wide publicity in the newspapers. He addressed as many as seven meetings in a day.

Alberta Butter Wins More Honors. Creamery butter from Alberta exhibitors, won the championship, special prizes, and all first prizes at the Toronto exhibition just closed, according to word received by C. Marker, dairy commissioner. The provinces competing were Alberta, Nova Scotia, Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan. The award of the championship was made by butter exhibits from this province.

Volunteer for Harvest Help. Nearly 150 men students from the two normal schools in Calgary have volunteered for work in the harvest fields of the province, and have been granted leave for a month from their studies, for that purpose.

Mineral Tax. Payments of the provincial mineral tax are coming in slowly to the department of Municipal Affairs. This tax was put into effect last April, and is a tax of three cents an acre on mineral lands, including oil lands. The C.P.R., which has large holdings of this class, has appealed to the Federal Government to disallow the legislation, and the Alberta Government has taken steps to combat this appeal.

Buffalo Herd Grows. So fast has the Dominion Government buffalo herd at Wainwright grown that it is now necessary to slaughter 2000 head. A contract has been given for this to an Edmonton man and factory for the manufacture of pemican from the buffalo meat is to be established in Edmonton. This food is used exclusively in the north.

Swiss Editors Coming. A party of seven Swiss editors are to visit the province during the coming week, in charge of officials of the C.P.R.

Large Party from Maine. A party of 120 people, travelling over the C.N.R. under the auspices of the Maine State chamber of commerce, visited the province for a day this week on their way to the Pacific coast.

More Irrigation. It is announced that the C.P.R. will increase the size of its irrigation headwaters at Kimball, in southern Alberta, by 50 percent, in anticipation of an increase in area of 40,000 acres in the Lethbridge district.

Game Laws. Hunters are reminded that the duck season will not open until September 15. The bag limit for ducks is three per day or 20 for the season. The open season for partridge is in October, south of the Red River. There is an open season north of the Battle River. The bag limit is 10 a day or 50 for the season. Prairie chicken season is from October 15 to October 31, with a bag limit of 10 a day, or 50 for the season.

New Chairman. Judge A. A. Carpenter, chairman of the public utilities board of the province, has been appointed chairman of the minimum wage board to succeed A. C. Brown, who has gone to Ontario.

THE WILD RIDE OF PETER MACEWEN

By K. P. Frederick

Peter Macewen was a lonely telegraph operator at a lonely tank station in the loneliest patch of ragged mountains in Utah. The station, a signpost and a water tank—stood at the head of a deep canon through which the railway streamer came now climbing to the craggy sides where the shadows were deep, now bordering the mountain stream that raced and roared down the canon for miles before it emerged from the mountains a real river.

Peter Macewen was lonely. He lived in the station and saw few people except when the two daily trains, one each way, passed his station. No one ever got on or off—that is, scarcely ever—for that part of Utah is populated only by mountain cowboys and miners who dig copper out of the heart of the earth. The excuse for Eagle Rock is that the trains need water there, and that in such a dangerous stretch of roadbed some one ought to be on watch to give the alarm if a wild car should happen by. The grade is steep, and occasionally cars get loose and go flying down the track and, unless derailed at some station, either topple off at a curve or crash into an oncoming locomotive.

"I wouldn't ride on one of the trains through the gorge at night," an old mining engineer said to Peter one day. "If you would give me a little value on my life, I prefer hunting lions in the mountains."

And then one day something happened that made Peter's life a little less lonely. A woman telegrapher was stationed at Rapids, the next station down the canon. She proved to be sociable; Peter spent long hours chatting with her over the wire. When it rained, as it often did in the mountains, he spent more time than usual chatting. When it was clear and the sun went trailing off to rest behind the blue haze that enshrouded the mountains, he would try to imagine what she looked like and wonder whether she were young and beautiful. Then his common sense would assert itself, and he would say to himself that she was probably fat and forty.

"Hello!" the ticker would click. "That you, Peter? Got your beans cooked yet?"

She called him Peter, and he called her Mary. She often made fun of him as a tenderfoot who tried to cook beans eight thousand feet above sea level—it is not easy to heat water in high altitudes.

"Come up and see me next summer. The beans will be ready when you get here," Peter would reply to the standing pleasantries. Then the two would talk about the small events that seem so big to those who are situated far from their fellow beings.

Peter became more interested in Mary each day—just man's natural curiosity. He had never heard her voice, only the unemotional tick, tick of the metallic sounder, the most businesslike and unpoetic contrivance imaginable; yet to him her finger on the key was different from any he had ever heard. He could endow her "sending" with all sorts of feminine traits and gradually pictured a girl of his own age or younger with bronze hair, blue-gray eyes and rosy cheeks, a girl full of fun—and lonesome; he knew that she was lonesome! He never could learn why she had decided to run a little station thirty dollars a month for a shaky railway on one of the worst stretches of line in the whole country. Then he would frown and conclude that she was old and perhaps ran a telegraph instrument because she couldn't do anything else, and had to make a living. The trainmen in their occasional chats with the lonely young man began to speak of the "girl down the line."

"Some little woman, I'm telling you," one brakeman asserted. "Believe me, if I was a bit younger, and it wasn't for the old lady and the old Provo way, I'd sure get that girl out of this lonesome hole!"

But Peter never showed up courage he was shy. Had he been less interested he would have thought nothing of inquiring.

Then one night the big storm came. The lightning ripped in continuous zig-zags between the canon walls, and the thunder went reverberating down the craggy depths like a thousand roaring lions. Peter rather enjoyed the storm.

"Tick, tick, Hello." It was the girl down the line who was calling. Peter ran to the sender, knowing that even safety appliances do not make a telegraph outfit safe in a thunderstorm.

"Hello, Peter. Some storm!" "Why are you fooling with the wire when you should have to?" ticked Peter.

"I'm frightened," she replied. "Something is going to happen, Peter; I feel it in my bones. Every time the thunder roars it makes me think that some awful thing is going to happen right here in the canon. Were you ever afraid in the dark?"

replied Peter. "Lots of times."

"Well, that's the way I feel, only a thousand times stronger."

"Are you all alone?" he asked. "My father's here, but he's in bed. He can't get out much, I couldn't stay upstairs in this storm, so I called you."

It was the first time she had mentioned her father.

"Well, we had better quit using the wire till we have to," Peter rejoined. "For some of this lightning may get us."

"All right. Good night."

"Good night."

Peter had scarcely left the key before a flash of lightning danced for a second about the instrument and a deafening crash seemed to rend the earth. Headless of the danger, he tried the key again; it was lifeless.

The lightning had done its work. Perhaps an hour elapsed, during which he watched the lightning play and finally wander off across the mesa between the mountains. A box car on the siding loomed black in the distant flashes. The roar of the stream, swelled to a mountain torrent by the downpour, grew louder and louder. Peter imagined how it was roaring over the spillway of the giant reservoir far up among the hills.

He had decided to go to bed, and was drowsily unlacing his shoes when he heard a faint "halloo" seemingly from far up the cliff. Stepping to the door in his stockinged feet, he listened.

"Halloo Down below there!" The voice was clear and distinct above the roaring waters.

"Halloo!" shouted Peter. "Better dig out, kid!" It was the voice of a prospector whose claim lay on the mountain trail behind the station. "The big pond is going out and it'll catch you sure, jump lively! There was a breathless pause. "Did you hear me?" the warning voice called again.

"Are you sure she's going?" Peter was thinking rapidly as he shouted the question.

"Sure as blazes. Part of the dam is cracked already, and nothing can stop her!"

Peter waited to hear no more; he fashed into the station and tried the ticker desperately. Not a flash from the instrument.

Now was he going to warn Mary and the rest of the agents down the line? He walked down the line in the little room. Then he gave an exclamation and whirled to the door.

Rushing to the platform and setting a crowbar from the tool shed, he leaped to the box car. With two well-directed blows he removed the blocks from in front of the wheels and with a crash the car went over the edge of the bar under the rear wheels.

He scrambled like a cat up its side as it gained momentum and rumbled out on the main line.

Crouching behind the brake wheel with his wet, stockinged feet gripping the boards, Peter felt the car gain speed with every click of the rail joints. Faster it went until the air was humming about his ears.

Round the first bend in the canon, round the second, round the third, on the car flew in the blackness while Peter clung to the brake wheel and strained his eyes for a glimpse of familiar crags.

Now he had a view of the river foaming and boiling; low; now a rocky pinnacle loomed for a second against the sky; then all was cutting blackness again.

He was safe so long as the heavy car could cling to the rails. Thirty, forty, fifty miles an hour they flew, and all the while Peter watched the stream for signs of the rush of water that he knew was sure to come.

He believed that he was still well ahead of it.

Soon the car lurched down upon the big bend twenty miles above Rapids. Round the long curve it sailed, leaning farther and farther till Peter, fearing that it would go over, crouched for a leap. Slowly it righted itself and rushed onward across the trestle that spanned a yawning fissure in the cliff.

A flying bit of rock struck his face, but he kept his hold on the brake wheel. His head was swimming, and he felt numbness creeping over his arms. Still the car bounded onward threatening every moment to leap to the rocks below.

Mary and her father must be reached, Peter was saying to himself; all the telegraphers down the length of the canon must be warned; lives must be saved. That he was sending himself to almost certain death never crossed his mind. He was brave because he did not know how to be afraid.

As the giant points of Needle Rock whizzed by Peter knew that the time for action had come. He settled himself into a squatting position on the reeling, hurtling car and slowly commenced to turn the brake wheel.

As the brakes began to bite into the rims sparks flew in all directions, and Peter's ears were filled with the shrill whistles and screeches of molten fighting metal. He began to tug harder; the cords in his neck swelled as he strained. Still the car roared along, but already it had slackened a little. The pressure was beginning to tell.

Shap! Crash! The strain had been too great for the blocks of the brake beam. The car leaped as if unleashed, reeled, toppled and then went over with a terrible crash.

Peter clutched wildly at empty air. He flew for what seemed minutes through space. The next instant he was struggling for life in water that foamed about his ears. Now he flung himself against the rocky wall. Now he was submerged until he was sure his head must crack. Suddenly he clutched a rock, brought up against it, broadside, felt a sharp twinge of pain, secured a hold, slipped, secured another and then clung there, too exhausted to do anything more.

At last, racked by pain at every move, he slowly dragged himself upward. Sharp points of rock tore his clothing and cut his body. The roaring stream seemed to be struggling to retain control of him; a dozen times it almost wrenched him loose.

Once on the rock, he stood up, tottered and fell forward. His right hand grasped a rail. He was on the track. It made him remember the great purpose of his ride. Two hundred yards above the track he sat in the light; he said to himself that it must be the Rapids station. Hobbiling, limping, he reached the platform and threw the door open.

A slip of a girl, eighteen or nineteen years old perhaps, leaped up from a chair in front of the telegraph instrument and gave a little cry of surprise and fright.

"Where is Mary?" cried Peter in a voice cracked and strained.

"Hurry! Where is she?" "I'm Mary," said the girl. "What do you want?"

"I'm Peter."

The girl gazed in astonishment at his torn and dripping clothes.

"Get your father and hike up the crags somewhere, anywhere," he said. "The dam has gone out above. Hurry!"

As the girl ran upstairs Peter slipped into the chair for the telegraph key, and his hand, smeared with blood, began to work the ticker: "Clickety click! Clickety click! Clickety click! Clickety click!"

Every telegrapher down the line—at Hailston, Black Hole, Coal Town and at Dalton—was at his instrument before the call had ceased.

"Reverend zone out!" Peter ticked. "Water on way down. Warn everybody. Dig out. Stop forty-four and warn the crew. Jump lively. Got it?"

"O.K. How much time?" came the reply.

"Ten minutes the limit," ticked Peter.

"O.K."

Peter whirled round. Mary was in the door, and beside her stood an old man.

"Now let's hurry," said Peter. "As they helped the old man through the doorway and scrambled up the rail they heard a roar as of a storm-swollen ocean. Peter stopped to listen. "Saved!" he cried. "Then, turning to the girl, he added, 'So this is Mary! And I thought you were fat and forty!'"

But Mary only clung to his arm the tighter.

PUTTING HIS FOOT IN IT

Johnny, having reached his teens, was invited out to dinner without his parents. An anxious mother told him to be careful about his manners and to speak in complimentary terms of the food served him. After he had tasted the soup, he remarked: "This is pretty good soup, what there is of it."

He was greatly disconcerted to observe a frown on the face of his hostess, and he hastened to repair his blunder by remarking: "And there's plenty of it—such as it is."—St. Paul Dispatch.

WHAT DID SHE SAY?

"You are no gentleman," she said, "if you think I said such a thing as 'you must not think I think you think you must be the kind of girl. I think you must be if you said such a thing as you said said I said I said you said you said.'"

It seems he knew she knew she knew she said just what she said she heard he had heard her friend had heard him say he had heard her say, but with intuitive feminine tact she accepted the apology.—N. Y. Globe.

FUNERAL BEFORE DEATH

Funeral services for an old couple who are still alive have just been held at Kochi, Japan.

The man, who is the proprietor of a fashionable restaurant, and his wife, are both seventy, and it was their desire that their funeral should take place before their death.

A long cortege of "mourners" left the Kochi park, and all the procedure of the funeral services according to Buddhist rites was carried out in regular order at the Hongwan Temple.

After the service the couple entertained many of their "mourners" at a dinner, given to celebrate their longevity. They believe that the "funeral" has given them a new lease of life.

GRANDE PRAIRIE POET IN RED DEER

Crippled Veteran Author of Delightful Verse.

Many people will have seen on the streets of the city during the past week the young man with injured face and a body partly crippled, who proudly wears a Veteran's button. He is Llewellyn P. Bode, ex-soldier of the famous R.C.R.'s, and noted all over Western Canada as the "poet of the Wanderlust." He was here disposing of his little volume of "The Wings of the Wanderlust." Mr. Bode's real home is at Claremont, Grande Prairie, Alberta, where he has a wife and two children living on his soldier's claim. His disability is due to sleeping sickness, contracted when on service overseas. His career has been a most interesting one. He has written poetry since the age of 10 years. While overseas, Bode corresponded with his mother at Bracebridge, Ont., in verse. She had written much poetry when a girl and it proved a most interesting and novel way of communicating. Every spring, Mr. Bode is seized with the wanderlust, and he leaves his little home and travels the country over, relying on his verse to obtain a living for his wife and himself. Every autumn, when the frost appears on the grain stalks in the early morning, he turns his face towards home, with knowing that there awaits him a happy young wife, whom he married after six days' courtship while overseas, and his two little children. This winter he plans to go to Hollywood, and hopes to sell his books to Charlie Chaplin and other motion picture people. One of his poems, "Alberta, My Alberta," will be found in another column of this issue.

PEACE OF BALKANS HANGS IN BALANCE AS LEAGUE FALTERS

Geneva, September 6.—The peace of the Balkans, with the alternative of another general war which may involve all Europe, hangs in the balance today as the council of the League of Nations hesitates.

If the council decides to ignore Italy's claims, and adjudicate the Italo-Greek dispute despite the threats of Premier Mussolini to withdraw from the league, it will merely be an issue of strength between Italy and the League of Nations. If the council declines to assert its right and power to answer Greece's request for mediation, statements of the leading nations declare the following things will happen:

1. The whole structure of the league will be undermined and the society of nations will collapse.
2. Four treaties which ended the world war will be imperilled for clauses which bind their signatories are similar to those of the covenant of the league.
3. Decisions of the league by which several smaller nations are shielding against their will will be nullified.

Urged to Stand Firm

As the council met today to formulate its faithful decision, telegrams arriving from all parts of the world, demanding that the league "stand pat" in the dispute, and refuse to give way to Italy.

The assembly of the league was to have held a session this morning but adjourned to clear the decks for the council whose decision is expected today.

The problem with which the council is faced and upon which the fate of the league and peace in Europe hangs, is briefly this:

Five Italian commissioners were slain at Janina, and Italy, holding Greece responsible, occupied Greek territory and demanded indemnity. Greece proposed an international investigation of the assassinations, and protested to the League of Nations against the punitive measures instituted by Italy. The latter country denied the league's authority in the matter, and threatened to withdraw from that organization if the subject were discussed. Italy held that the council of ambassadors at Paris was the only body competent to adjudicate the matter.

Much more involved. So much more involved, however, than a mere question in dispute between Italy and Greece that the grave consequences may result from the league council's decision. Already Jaco-Slavia, which acquiesced unwillingly in a recent decision by the league, is asking if its functions are to say what small nations do while larger ones do as they please. The Serbs would be one of the first to make difficulties in the Balkans. It is believed, if the league collapses of fails to assert its authority.

BANISHING THE WRONG

Each solitary kind action that is done, the whole world over, is working briskly in its own sphere to restore the balance between right and wrong. The more kindness there is on the earth at any given moment, the greater is the tendency of the balance between right and wrong to correct itself and remain in equilibrium. Nay, this is short of the truth. Kindness allies itself with right to invade the wrong and beat it off the earth.

SLIGHTLY MIXED

"The motor traffic gets worse and worse," said the old lady in the city. "Really, nowadays, it isn't safe to be a pedestrian."

Criminal Fools and Canadian Forests

A beautiful stand in the Nipigon district, near which a Canadian Pacific Bungalow Camp has been erected. Imagine the result if this camp should be neglected. Below—Canadian Pacific tank car on the road. Left—Showing the pumps and how the three streams high over a 90 foot tower.

LOOK at the bounds at your feet, the walls which surround you, the roof over your head, the chair in which you sit, and your furniture. All are products of the Canadian forests, and practically everything you come into contact with in the day depends on the forest for one or more of its component parts. Then take the foods you eat, the paper you read by the wood fire at night; the food is produced by Canadian farmers who depend on the forest for a regular supply of moisture, the paper is composed largely of wood pulp. It is almost beyond comprehension—the amount of lumber used in construction each day, and the amount used in construction and in the development of the country each year. Canada's prosperity, her whole future, is one with that of her forests.

Ontario alone gives employment to 17,000 men in the bush; pulp and paper mills in the same province employ 8,000 men, and the amount of capital invested in the two industries amounts to over $150,000,000. Yet, for every tree that is felled, for every log that helps to keep the wheels of industry moving, for every board that is used in construction, twelve are destroyed in the forest by fire. This means that forest fires consume twelve times the amount of the lumber which is the life of Canadian industries, and that each year fire is depleting the forest which should hold back the rain fall so as to ensure throughout the year the moisture which is the life of the farm. Five hundred thousand acres of forest are burned over in Ontario each year, and the government of this province is burdened with a forest fire protection organization which costs $3,000 a day.

Why is the country put to such a loss? Because there are no means of segregating the criminal fools and careless. Take the fire which in October last took forty-four lives, rendered thousands homeless, and destroyed property valued at eight million dollars in the vicinity of Halesburg, the ter-

All Roads Built and Maintained By Government in Future in Quebec

Premier Taschereau, of Quebec, made public an interesting statement a short time ago. He was dealing with the financial position of his province. He said that the revenue of Quebec was now so buoyant and certain that in future the government would not only carry on its extensive programme of road construction, but would also maintain the roads in good condition after they were built.

He said it would no longer be necessary to ask the farmers to pay taxes for road building, nor would it be necessary to ask the municipalities to spend money to keep the roads up.

In addition, he declared, there was not much sense in putting money into roads unless they were kept in good state of repair after they were constructed.

So the government proposed doing the whole thing, asking for neither taxes nor work from the people living along the roads.

Premier Taschereau said that this policy was made possible because the province is now getting the revenue that formerly went to boot-leggers and others.

At the same time, the government by controlling all sale of liquor itself had abolished the bar, had practically killed the business of boot-legging, had reduced drunkenness to a minimum, had placed beer within the reach of the poor man instead of confining the drinking of liquor to the rich, and had assured the sale of chemically pure, guaranteed liquor to those who bought it.

In other words, the method of government control and sale produced true moderation, and the revenues of the province were benefitting, instead of the illicit dealer.

That is something to think about, especially when we, in this province, ponder over the revenue tightness here, and the constant and heavy taxation—with the promise of alleviation unless something is done to get it down.—Advt.

There is not such a thing as regulation of a watch that needs cleaning. Dust or corroded oil is just as apt to make it gain as lose. Many fine watches will continue to run for months after every bit of oil is dried up, but injury will surely follow. When the watch finally does stop, the highly tempered, finely finished steel pivots and winding parts are so badly worn that the cost of repairing will be very high and the watch may never again be as good.

To oil properly and clean a watch, the entire watch is taken apart, more than 150 parts; each part thoroughly cleaned, the old oil taken out and all pivots repolished; the watch is then put together and new oil put in the proper places.
